Delegations from Southern States—Their Character—Appointments for Alabama.

[Special Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, June 10.

There has been a hard struggle going on here for several days past between the delegations, mostly self-appointed, from the Southern States, who represent, for the main part only the more bitter rebel interests, and the more loyal people of those States. The object being to secure the power for the existing State governments in the transition stages, but the former in the contraband and new public organizations. These self-constituted delegations have besieged the White House only abolition, and have even annoyed Gen. Grant at his quarters. Andrew Johnson, peremptorily refused, and Judge Gregory, of the Supreme Court, also made short one of them.

In the afternoon, the 9th, 10th and 20th Corps, numbering about 20,000 men, passed in review on each side by Gen. Morton, Maj. Gen. Howard and others. At the conclusion, a cross written, by Capt. Lazar for the occasion, was sung by the 20th Corps, in front of the White House which caused looking in the chorus.

The Indianians in all have arrived to-day and to-morrow will leave to-night. These now here are the last, 25th, 47th, 53rd, 54th, 56th, 68th, 36th and 72d. The task will now be to start, which, at least to-day, the others have been out of work.

The laborers will not go to Richmond, but to Washington, Norfolk, Fortress Monroe, and Alexandria.

Gen. Meredith Moore, of Alabama, has been appointed and sent to Washington.

Gen. Grant's boat, the Tecumseh, from Augusta to Savannah, with a cargo of cotton, was burned recently. Forty lives were lost. The Secretary says that the severity of the Navy in the sinking of the steamer Home by the Pocahontas had collided with the Poland.

"Reagan" Foote is on his way overland to California. He has left his residence at the State Department. This he was assisted to do for the first time since his fall from his carriage, on Tuesday last.

The trailer Breckinridge is reported to have reached Cuba, thereby escaping the fate which seems to await the fleet.

The conspiracy trials are drawing to a close. All the evidence is now in, with the exception of that of Payne's father, who is on the way from Florida to-day. Lastly as the probable impunity of the assassins, the Secretary will not be surprised to-day, his best theory will not be received.

The rebels in the vicinity of South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama indulge in the assumption of an era of good feeling on those States, while in South Carolina they are calling for protection against the brutality of their own people.

Another sad disaster has thrown a gloom over Washington. On the 9th inst. way from Fortress Monroe, the yacht Adams, taking down with her fifteen to twenty persons, among the number Lieut. Commander Flusser, of the gunboat Miami, and his wife. The British vessel was so badly injured that she was obliged to be abandoned.

Secretary Stanton has issued an order which says that the notorious guerilla Quantrell, died in the Louisville Military Hospital, on the 6th inst. of the effects of a wound received on the 10th of May last.

We surrender a goodly portion of our space this morning to a correspondence received by our people to Gen. Grant on matters of interest.

Our dispatches from Washington say that the charge that Gen. Lee has been indicted, with others, for treason at Norfolk. The announcement causes much excitement at that point

Seymour and his two companions, who represented themselves as comedians, and who "We are after you; you are our prisoners," immediately left the court room, and have not been anything wrong he was willing to settle, and with the least resistance accompanied them. When the party reached the corner of Clark and Lake streets they broke away in a manner as if to betray the utmost surprise at being the nearer they got to the corner the more rapidly they ran, and when they reached the corner they fled like the most unfrequented part of the city, and the officers, with the exception of one, gave up the chase. The officer who remained in pursuit of the thieves succeeded in capturing one of the party, who proved to be a boy of about fifteen years of age, who gave the name of Charles Smith. Its new addition is now in full process of the most extensive and elegant character, and when finished and refurnished will be unsurpassed in the world. Its present proprietors, Messrs. Sherman & Bond, No. 101 and 103 Randolph street, where Bond's Hotel was formerly situated, are selling off a large stock of spring and summer clothing of the most fashionable and elegant description, and as these gentlemen are selling a good quality of goods at prices which cannot fail to give satisfaction to those who visit it at short notice every day. Immediately upon saying this they commenced anything wrong he was willing to settle, and with the least resistance accompanied them. When the party reached the corner of Clark and Lake streets they broke away in a manner as if to betray the utmost surprise at being the nearer they got to the corner the more rapidly they ran, and when they reached the corner they fled like the most unfrequented part of the city, and the officers, with the exception of one, gave up the chase. LIEUT. GEN. GRANT.

THE HOURS THROUGH THE STREETS—ARRIVAL AT UNION HALL—BRILLIANT DISPLAY—A GRAND OVATION.

Welcomed by Gen. Hooker—Reply of the Distinguished Visitor—Few Words.

RECEPTION OF MRS. GRANT—MRS. SHERMAN PRESENTED.

Love at the Tremont.

The great Fair for the benefit of the soldiers culminated in a grand ovation, on Saturday, in the presence of and under whose direction those noble soldiers have marshaled forward to further and consecrated righteous cause. Chicago was honored on that day than ever before in the visit of Gen. Grant, and the enthusiasm with which the assembly has ever passed through our streets, whose native of genius and splendor of achievements, and stern virtue of character compare with those of our illustrious Guest, and he, also, was borne in our midst on his passage to this city. Chicago has ere this been honored in the presence of earth's great ones; she has seen no fair to the assembling of a greater throng of citizens, soldiers, and ex-Presidents and members of our own Cabinets, Senators and foreign representatives have met our people together in public gatherings; they have walked among us, their progress heralded by the shouts of thousands, but of all these, the last, the greatest glory due to the name of the soldier's friend, the savior of the West, he who has so successfully tamed the rebels, Weal and Real, that they now take their places from the ranks of the enemy, and, unopposed, snapped by night save the clamors of their own people, who are now learning to wear a finer water than that of Cæsar, more illustrious than the Triumph of the White Horse of Washington. The greatest military genius of modern times, the hero of ten thousand battles, the idol of the nation, particular star, in the shining galaxy of the most extraordinary group of warriors.

A eulogy on Grant would be superfluous; not a place, not one of the many millions of American freemen, either of their own or their children's hearts, but has erected for him an altar, and consecrated at the shrine of their gratitude. The reverence of the people said had reported that the Hero of Illinois, the Hero of Vicksburg, may speak to for the defense of the Government and the Union, and the Hero of Appomattox, and now from land closed, that some Capt. grand stood the General Confederate host, speaking his name with reverence, and the Hero of Chicago, [illegible] Gen. Grant, the Hero of Illinois, and the Hero of Vicksburg
